Alvin, 66, was deep in the woods in Louisiana, last December when a broken balloon caught his eye. Attached was a piece of paper decorated with sparkly star stickers. It read "Dear Santa, my name is Luna. I am four years old. I live in Liberal, Kansas. This year I have been nice. I would like candy, a Spider-Man ball, a Frozen dolls, a puppy. With love, Luna."

Alvin's heart hammered in his chest. Ever since he was a child, he had dreamed of this very scene. He believed this was his childhood wish coming true. And he decided to make Luna's wish come true too. So he posted the Christmas list on his Facebook page, asking for help to locate the sender.

Meanwhile, Leticia, the mother of four-year-old Luna, had no idea that such an effort was underway. It had been a hard year for them. On a particularly tough day last December, Leticia told Luna to send her wishes to Santa by balloon. The girl was excited. Leticia helped her write down her wishes, put the note into a Christmas red balloon and took her out to release her wishes on the chilly windy morning.

One day in January, a friend called Leticia, "Someone found Luna's balloon." Her jaw dropped. Then she logged on to Facebook and saw Alvin's post and many netizens trying to help. Leticia was deeply touched and called Alvin. When Alvin told her how much it would mean to him to fulfill the girl's wishes, she agreed to let him meet Luna. Back in Louisiana, Alvin got busy collecting toys from his newfound Facebook community.

On a morning in April, just as chilly and windy as the day when Luna waved goodbye to her balloon, Alvin made a trip to their house. He presented all the gifts, including a puppy. Luna cried with delight. Later, they sat down together to share home-made breakfast. They all felt as if they had known each other forever. Having received so much generosity, Leticia and Luna expressed their gratitude and intended to pay it forward.

Every year, Earth Day is celebrated on April 22, and people all around the world celebrate this day by taking part in environmental activities and working towards raising awareness of important issues that our planet Earth is currently facing, like global warming and pollution.

Before the 1970s, there were almost no environmental laws and industries were allowed to dump their industrial waste and fumes anywhere in the world. A US Senator by the name of Gaylord Nelson was concerned about the growing levels of pollution. So in the spring of 1970, Senator Nelson created Earth Day as a way to promote awareness of these issues in the US. His plan was successful, as 20 million Americans started a demonstration (示威游行) for Earth Day around the world. As a result, the US government started an agency called the US Environmental Protection Agency. Over the next few years, the movement spread across the world and Earth Day became internationally recognized.

The theme of Earth Day 2021 is "restore our Earth". The focus of this year's theme is restoring Earth's natural processes and ecosystems. Apart from that, the goal of this year's Earth Day is to focus on taking green technologies and innovative (创新的) actions to restore the Earth's natural ecosystem. More than stopping pollution and global warming, this year's Earth Day focuses on reversing the damage caused to the Earth.

Despite strict environmental laws in many countries across the world, problems such as global warming, air pollution and climate change continue to threaten our planet. Many scientists around the world are warning us about the already irreversible problems that have been created by microplastics, oil spills and depletion (消耗) of the ozone layer. If the human race continues on the same path as before, the extinction of the human race is not too far off in the future. Earth Day seeks to help raise people's awareness around the world of these issues and bring positive changes, so future generations stand a chance of living a safer life.

- () 5. Which activity is suitable to celebrate Earth Day?
- A. Plastic waste collection.
 B. A long-distance bicycle race.
 C. A lecture about human rights.
 D. Medical research on cancers.
- () 6. What is Paragraph 2 mainly about?
- A. The history of Earth Day.
 B. The success of Gaylord Nelson.
 C. Environmental changes in the 1970s.
 D. The establishment of environmental laws.
- () 7. What is special about Earth Day of 2021?
- A. It helps to slow down global warming.
 B. It aims to bring the Earth back to normal.
 C. It focuses on reducing individuals' carbon footprint.
 D. It promotes the development of emerging industries.
- () 8. What is the purpose of the text?
- A. To predict the future of the Earth.
 B. To describe our terrible living environment.
 C. To state the progress in protecting the Earth.
 D. To increase people's awareness of Earth Day.

A [2024·福建泉州高一期中]

In 1947 a group of famous people from the art world decided to hold an international festival of music, dance and theatre in Edinburgh. The idea was to reunite Europe after World War II.

It quickly attracted famous names such as Alec Guinness, Richard Burton, Dame Margot Fonteyn and Marlene Dietrich as well as the big symphony orchestras (交响乐团). It became a fixed event every August and now attracts about 400,000 people yearly.

At the same time, the Edinburgh Festival Fringe (the Fringe) appeared as a challenge to the official festival. Eight theatre groups uninvited in 1947 turned up, believing that everyone should have the right to perform, and they did so in a public house that had been disused for years.

Soon, groups of students firstly from the University of Edinburgh, and later from the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge, Durham and Birmingham were making the journey to the Scottish capital each summer to perform plays by little-known writers in small halls.

Today the Fringe, once less embraced, has far outgrown the festival with around 1,500 performances of music, dance and theatre on every one of the 21 days it lasts. And yet as early as 1959, with only 19 theatre groups performing, some said it was getting too big.

A paid administrator (管理人员) was first employed only in 1971, and today there are eight administrators working all year round and the number rises to 150 during August itself. In 2004 there were 200 places housing 1,695 shows by over 600 different groups from 50 different countries. More than 1.25 million tickets were sold.

- () 1. Why did some famous people hold an international festival in 1947?
- A. To honour heroes of World War II.
B. To introduce young theatre groups.
C. To attract great artists from Europe.
D. To bring Europe together again.
- () 2. Why did some uninvited theatre groups come to Edinburgh?
- A. They came to take up a challenge.
B. They thought they were also famous.
C. They wanted to take part in the festival.
D. They owned a public house there.
- () 3. What does the underlined word “embraced” mean in Paragraph 5?
- A. Accepted. B. Checked.
C. Allowed. D. Controlled.
- () 4. Why are the numbers mentioned in the last paragraph?
- A. To prove different groups have come to the festival.
B. To show administrators are busy in August.
C. To prove the tickets of the festival sell well.
D. To show the festival has grown rapidly.

B [2024·河南南阳六校高一期末]

The annual Redhead Days Festival in Tilburg, Netherlands, drew thousands of red-haired people from around the world in August, 2023. The three-day event is a celebration of red hair, a feature only shared by only 1%—2% of the global population. And although redheads can be found all over the world, the numbers are higher for people from the north of Europe, where the rate (比率) is between 2% and 6%.

For many attendees, like 30-year-old Scottish Liam Hunter, the festival is an opportunity to feel a sense of belonging and self-acceptance. Hunter, who has experienced bullying (霸凌) due to his hair colour, expressed a sense of satisfaction and unity at the event. “I don’t feel lonely anymore. I feel together, a part of something,” he said.

The event, which attracted about 5,000 redheads from various countries, offered a range of activities including painting workshops, make-up and skincare knowledge, photo shoots, musical performances, and speed-meet events.

Interestingly, the festival’s start was somewhat accidental. Bart Rouwenhorst, an artist and the event’s organizer, placed an advertisement in the local newspaper in 2005 seeking 15 red-haired models for a painting project. Surprisingly, he received responses from 150 individuals. Although Rouwenhorst is not a redhead himself, he decided to organize a group photo with all the respondents. The gathering got much attention and was considered a success, leading the organizers to establish it as an annual event.

Now the festival serves as a special stage for redheads to celebrate their differences, develop a sense of community, and raise awareness of the challenges they face, such as bullying and increased sensitivity (过敏) to the sun. It also provides an opportunity for non-redheads to learn about and appreciate the uniqueness of red hair.

- () 5. What can we learn from the first paragraph?
- A. Redheads celebrate their festival with various activities.
- B. Red hair is a common disease among the global population.

C. The Redhead Days Festival is celebrated around the world.

D. Population in northern Europe has a higher rate of redheads.

- () 6. What does Hunter’s experience tell us?
- A. The redheads enjoy a high social position.
- B. The redheads take pride in their difference.
- C. The redheads face discrimination sometimes.
- D. The redheads have trouble keeping up with others.
- () 7. What is Paragraph 4 mainly about?
- A. The origin of the festival.
- B. The popularity of the festival.
- C. Customs during the festival.
- D. Activities during the festival.
- () 8. Which of the following can best describe the event?
- A. Challenging. B. Informal.
- C. Remarkable. D. Meaningless.

People around the world take celebrating seriously, and many of them are willing to go to great effort and expense to plan and participate in public celebrations.

Exactly when and where human beings began coming together in public to celebrate as a group can date back to hunter-gatherer societies, when success in the never-ending search for food, clothing, and shelter must have aroused the need to celebrate together.

Besides the need for food and survival, there are records of religious parades dating back to 3000 BC. Parades were also used to demonstrate military power and celebrate military victories; to attract customers to events such as the circus by giving the public a sample of the entertainment; or to celebrate ethnic (民族的) connections and holidays. The New York Times of October 28, 1917, summed it up by saying, "If you take the parades out of history, you have precious little history left."

Of course, many modern celebrations are not connected to any religion. In the Internet era, electronic communication makes it possible to organize celebrations almost instantly. "Flash mobs" are a new way of gathering and celebrating. Secretly planned online, they bring together tens, hundreds, or thousands of individuals to perform some unusual or funny acts in a public place. Flash mobs reflect not only the increased speed of communication but also a lighter attitude to celebrations. No longer is public celebrating something necessarily linked to human survival, religion, or deep traditions.

This does not mean, however, that modern celebrations are not socially conscious. One striking image inspiring community spirit is Edwards' photograph of crowds in Australia, who were gathering in the rain for a music festival to raise funds for wildfire relief. Throughout history, across countries and cultures, celebrations are always worth the significant amount of time and money spent planning, preparing, organizing, and carrying out an event. The priority given to celebrating seems to put it alongside food, shelter, love, and freedom as a basic need of humanity.

- () 1. According to the passage, which one of the following events can make celebrations happen?
- A. A business has made a huge profit.
B. It has been sunny for a week.
C. Farmers harvest in the autumn.
D. A new museum opens in the city centre.

- ()2. What does the underlined sentence in Paragraph 3 imply?
- If there is no parade, human history will be more precious.
 - Students should be taught the importance of parades in history class.
 - Only parades can be recorded in history books.
 - Many significant historic moments featured a parade.
- ()3. Which of the following best describes a flash mob?
- Four strangers meet at a concert and then decide to perform together in a public square.
 - Someone announces openly a series of performances to take place at school.
 - An online group plans and performs a dance in a crowded train station.
 - The number of people watching a street performer grows to several hundred.
- ()4. Which of these is the best title for the passage?
- Why we celebrate?

Gifts for Jace

I'll never forget the day when one of my students shyly raised his hand and said that he had never received a gift. My shocked fifth-graders were discussing a reading story about a boy who was not going to be getting anything for his birthday because money was tight that year. Even though this class was very open during reading discussions, Jace's honesty surprised even me. What was even more eye-opening was the fact that this sweet, fifth-grade boy had gone ten years and never experienced the joy and surprise of receiving a present.

I searched my mind for a reason why he might be saying this. Did he want attention from his peers? No, that was definitely not his style. Was he exaggerating? Again, he was not the type. Then I remembered his story. His mother was out of the picture and he lived alone with his dad. His father had a hard time holding down a job, and coming to think of it, I didn't see his father at registration or parent-teacher conferences. Even though on the outside Jace was a bit untidy, he always came to school with a smile and sincere enthusiasm for learning.

A couple of weeks after Jace's comment, he was absent from school due to the fact that he had moved away. This happened to be the day I was sending home the annual note about the classroom Christmas gifts exchange. Traditionally, each boy was to bring a gift for a boy in the three-dollar range and the same was true for each girl.

As we were discussing the specifics, a girl raised her hand and sincerely suggested that we do away with our traditional policy, and each buy a gift for Jace instead. The enthusiasm grew as the students discussed the kinds of things they knew Jace would like. We took a quick vote and consistently agreed to go ahead with this wonderful idea.

注意:续写词数应为 150 个左右。

Paragraph 1:

Days before our Christmas vacation, the gifts began to pour in. _____

Paragraph 2:

As I drove down his road, I saw a light flashing and it signaled which home was his.
